Kommentar This lecture series aims to give a broad introduction to the literature and culture of the long eighteenth-century in Britain, starting with the Restoration Period and ending with Romanticism. Topics will cover aspects of cultural history (e.g. the metropolis London; the age of revolutions), philosophy (The Enlightenment), and literature (epic, drama, novel, satire and poetry). In the light of the Jane-Austen-Bicentenary in 2017, a particular focus will be on the works of Jane Austen.

Recommended background reading: Paul Langford, Eighteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford, 2000); James Sambrook, The Eighteenth Century: The Intellectual and Cultural Context of English Literature 1700-1789. London and New York, 1986.

A reading list for BA and MA students will be uploaded on StudIP.

Registration in StudIP until 14 April.

Kommentar "What does it mean to be "Canadian"?" and "How could one define "Canadian literature"?" These are questions that, along with background knowledge on Canadian society and culture, this lecture series is meant to provide. Apart from surveying the development of Canada towards nationhood and then on towards its endorsement of multiculturalism as an official policy and its flirtation with ideas of the transnationalism, lectures will focus on issues of cultural contact and intercultural exchange, the role of culture in nation-building, Canadian literature's preoccupation with history and mythology, and its preferred form of historiographic metafiction, as well as Canada's self-promotion as a country open to immigrants while confronting accusations of marginalisation and racialization.

Readings: articles on Canada and Canadian writing; selected poems and short fiction; the play The Rez Sisters by Tomson Highway; the graphic narrative Riel by Chester Brown (excerpts) and the following novels: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (excerpts); Timothy Findley, The Wars, Joy Kogawa, Obasan; and Michael Ondaatje, In the Skin of a Lion. Only short texts will be uploaded in StudIP.

| Kommentar | This lecture course is intended to familiarize students with some of the dominant trends in American poetry and fiction from the end of World War II to the present. We will begin by discussing Cold War attempts to distinguish literature from propaganda, and then explore the growing significance of Jewish American literature in the context of Holocaust commemoration. Next we will discuss how other literatures of identity—such as African American literature, feminist literature, and the literatures of various ethnic and social groups—gained prominence during a period known as the "culture wars." We will also study the Beats and the emergence of postmodernism, paying particular attention to its relation to modernist innovations on the one hand and to activist movements on the other. One frame for these explorations will be the development of what scholars have begun to call "the program era," a historical period (extending from 1945 to the present) marked by the affiliation of writers with creative writing programs in universities. We will conclude by studying some of the literature written after 9/11 and also discuss the emergence of the digital humanities. |

M.AS.01.1: Kulturwissenschaftliche Übung 'American Cultural Studies II'

Kommentar In this seminar, we will trace the history of industrialism in the U.S. from its roots in the nineteenth century through the first half of the twentieth century. Industrialization describes a growing system of production, transportation, and communication. It also fostered urbanization, the professionalization of work, immigration, and class conflict. We will therefore discuss industrialization through four interconnected topics, i.e. the growth of cities, the change of market dynamics, the labor movement, and progressive politics. Throughout the semester, we will consider different primary materials (political pamphlets, speeches, autobiographies, historical photographs and advertisement) to gain a better understanding of the way technological progress and industrial expansion transformed American culture and society. We will explore industrial centers like Pittsburgh and Detroit; talk about industrialists like Andrew Carnegie and Henry Ford; analyze corporate steel and oil empires; and discuss historical labor strikes as form of resistance to industrial power.

Reading material will be made available at the beginning of the semester via StudIP.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 35 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 March and 01 April 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. The class will start in the first week of the semester. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

This - voluntary but highly recommended - tutorial is taught in conjunction with the class "Introducing Critical Theory I" (modules: B.AS.04; B.AS.301; M.EP.01b; M.EP01b-L). The tutorial provides an opportunity to discuss the texts covered in the course, to address questions and to support the comprehension of the theories and critical concepts in question by means of close readings and in-depth discussion. Difficulties and questions regarding the theoretical texts can be addressed and revisited according to students' needs. Hence participating in the tutorial will also be helpful as a preparation for the final exam in the Critical Theory class.

Further material will be provided on Stud.IP.

Details about the organization of this tutorial will be announced in the first session.

Registration: Please register on Stud.IP between 01 March and 30 April. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP as well. The class will start in the first week of the semester.

This course is designed to introduce students to various cultural theories and enables them to use theoretical concepts for their close readings of literary texts. Students are expected to study the assigned texts in depth and detail, to contribute to class discussion regularly and substantially, to do independent research, and to complete the course assignments (which are all part of the "portfolio"). We will use Mary Shelley's Frankenstein (Second Norton Critical Edition) edited by J. Paul Hunter (ISBN-10: 0393927938). You are expected to have read the complete novel by April 20, 2017. Regular attendance is required. You may not miss more than two sessions. Registration in StudIP until 14 April. | |

| | This course is meant for students with little experience in using literary and cultural theories in the analysis and criticism of literature and other cultural products. Therefore, it serves as an introduction to our departmental style of working with "text". | |
| | While the lecture provides students with overview knowledge on the topic or period covered, this course deepens and enlarges students' knowledge on various theories and their uses, on key terms and ideas, and on their critical uses. | |
| | The module expects students to prepare a portfolio (about 5000 words) in which they chart and critically reflect on what they have learnt in the courses; they are also required to show that they can use literary or cultural theories appropriately and with benefit. | |

We will discuss novel approaches that look at the theory behind this phenomenon and we will discuss various experiments that have been carried out to investigate this. |

| Kommentar | Every native speaker of English can distinguish good from bad English sentences. But how can they do that? Speakers must have (unconscious) knowledge about English grammar. Unravelling this knowledge is the job of syntacticians. In this course, we will investigate this remarkable capacity of the human mind and we'll see what principles and rules underlie the grammar of English. We will also look at what new questions rise in the study to this capacity with respect to language change, language variation and language acquisition There will be two written exams (mid term and end term); as both courses make a unit parts of the exam can be assigned in the "Introduction to Syntactic Theory" or in the lab class (where we will primarily practice syntactic theory). | |

| Kommentar | The history of the European Middle Ages as well as the general cultural self-understanding of Western Cristendom are unthinkable without the intellectual foundation of the Bible. This series of lectures will serve as an introduction to the major canonized parts of the Bible through the lense of English literature composed during the Middle Ages. Students will therefore encounter specific vernacular responses in the retellings, renderings and fictionalizations of canonized as well as apocryphal material in Old and Middle English texts. The lecture will also raise specific questions concerning the selection, translation, authorization, theological commentary and spiritual devotion in English biblical literature and seek to answer these with the help of the historical context. Students are recommended to purchase a copy of The New Oxford Annotated Bible: New Revised Standard version with Apocrypha , ed. by M. Coogan, 3rd ed. (Oxford: OUP, 2000). |

Kommentar Canada and the United States have many things in common: besides sharing the longest unguarded border in the world and strong economical bounds, they enjoy a unique geographical situation in North America. Unsurprisingly, the attacks on the World Trade Center in September 2001 had an immediate impact on both countries. The events of what is now known as 9/11 affected at once the daily lives of many Canadian and American citizens as well as the U.S.-Canada border. Following the September 11 attacks, there has also been a strong literary response on both sides of the 49th parallel. The aim of this course is to provide an introduction to Francophone and Anglophone Canadian Ground Zero fiction as well as a very brief introduction to American fiction dealing with the same agenda. In a transnational frame of thought, we will analyze selected literary texts from various authors (among others, Margaret Atwood, Paul Auster, Roch Carrier, Siri Hustvedt, Shauna Singh Baldwin, and Amy Waldman). We will explore how both countries' cultural imaginary of September 11 is mirrored in their respective aesthetic representations. Issues such as surveillance, borders (geographical, social, cultural and psychological borders), trauma, identity and commemoration are key points to be discussed. In our conclusion, we will assess the current situation, more than fifteen years after the collapse of the Twin Towers.

A syllabus and a selected bibliography will be provided at the beginning of the semester.

Course will start on April 20, 2017.

Registration deadline: April 14, 2017.

Instructor: Diane Bélisle-Wolf, Mainz (dbelisle-wolf@web.de)

-> Note that this course is listed ALSO in StudIP, even though it is administered externally. If you wish to get credits for this course, please register in StudIP, too! Otherwise no exam date will be set in FlexNow.

| Kommentar | Dealing with such a simple product only consisting of ink on paper, the book or literature industry has played a critical role in enabling the world to advance to how we know it today. Driven by new technologies and influenced by various factors, it is undergoing change today. This course will examine the literature industry, from its beginnings until today, the factors, which helped shape it and its underlying practices; aiming to answer the overall question: What is the business of literature? We will begin by looking at the relationships of authors, readers and texts. Dealing with theoretical background, we will also look at how it developed historically. Furthermore, this course will also provide an overview of the buying, selling and writing of books as well as its close ties with marketing and consumption of literature. |

| Kommentar | The colonial rule over India greatly informed British literature of the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries. These diverse narratives served as an instrument for spreading the colonial ideology and the particular interest in India among the British. In this project-oriented seminar, we will explore how India was represented in the diverse literatures of Britain particularly during the late 20th and early 21st centuries. By doing so, the course aims at developing e-learning modules on the reception of India in European narratives. Within smaller task force groups, students will be guided in research methods and work with primary, as well as secondary sources in order to prepare these for the e-learning modules. The course will train research skills as well as intensive text-based work that will help improve writing and reading skills. Readings: As the seminar focuses on a very wide range of literatures, no readings are indicated at this point. Instead they will be provided to the individual groups at the beginning of the course. Registration: via StudIP until 16 April |

| Kommentar | This lecture series aims to give a broad introduction to the literature and culture of the long eighteenth-century in Britain, starting with the Restoration Period and ending with Romanticism. Topics will cover aspects of cultural history (e.g. the metropolis London; the age of revolutions), philosophy (The Enlightenment), and literature (epic, drama, novel, satire and poetry). In the light of the Jane-Austen-Bicentenary in 2017, a particular focus will be on the works of Jane Austen. Recommended background reading: Paul Langford, Eighteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford, 2000); James Sambrook, The Eighteenth Century: The Intellectual and Cultural Context of English Literature 1700-1789 . London and New York, 1986. |

| Voraussetzungen | Students interested in taking part in MOOC for credits should have a good idea of how to write a term paper since this will not be part of the course, but will be expected by way of exam. | |
| Kommentar | Are you interested in looking beyond the University's horizon? Are you good at timing and staggering yourself? Then a MOOC may be just the thing for you. FutureLearn.com is an online course portal hosting MOOCs, Massive Open Online Courses, produced and maintained by major international (mostly British) universities. Among FutureLearn's partner universities are the Universities of Glasgow and Edinburgh, Exeter University and Sheffield University, King's College and Royal Holloway, London, and the University of East Anglia; but also the Australian Monash University and the University of Cape Town, to name but a few. | |

MOOCs are not taught like our courses are, with regular 90 mins meetings over the semester, but tend to be shorter, with running times between 4 and 6 weeks. They expect you to put in about 3 hours of work per week, and they consist of online materials to work with and to work through, taking part in online discussions and (usually) short quizzes.

If you are interested in taking part in a MOOC and in getting credits for it, sign up through StudIP. You will get updates on available courses on FutureLearn. To gain credits, you will have to take part in two MOOCs.

This course can be used in fulfilment of modules M.EP.04a and M.EP.10d (term-paper modules).

This course is NOT suitable for exchange students. It is also NOT suitable for first-semester students (but fear not, it will be offered again!).

Kommentar

Travel writing is a hybrid genre that encompasses diverse forms such as letters, diaries, novels, scientific reports, guidebooks, etc. This course will shed light on how 18-century tourism (e.g. the Grand Tour), colonial expansion and exploration shaped and fuelled this highly popular genre. Based on selected examples of 18-century British travel writing we will address questions of veracity, fictionality and subjectivity. Since travelling abroad implies an encounter with other cultures we will also consider the complex dynamics of self-perception and representation of "the Other." Finally, by comparing works by male and female writers, we will investigate how gender may influence formal, aesthetic and thematic choices.

Required Reading (to be read before the beginning of the term): Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, The Turkish Embassy Letters; Henry Fielding, The Journal of a Voyage to Lisbon; Laurence Sterne, A Sentimental Journey Through France and Italy, by Mr. Yorick; excerpts for additional reading will be provided during the term.

Kommentar

"What does it mean to be "Canadian"?" and "How could one define "Canadian literature"?" These are questions that, along with background knowledge on Canadian society and culture, this lecture series is meant to provide. Apart from surveying the development of Canada towards nationhood and then on towards its endorsement of multiculturalism as an official policy and its flirtation with ideas of the transnationalism, lectures will focus on issues of cultural contact and intercultural exchange, the role of culture in nation-building, Canadian literature's preoccupation with history and mythology, and its preferred form of historiographic metafiction, as well as Canada's self-promotion as a country open to immigrants while confronting accusations of marginalisation and racialization.

Readings: articles on Canada and Canadian writing; selected poems and short fiction; the play The Rez Sisters by Tomson Highway; the graphic narrative Riel by Chester Brown (excerpts) and the following novels: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (excerpts); Timothy Findley, The Wars, Joy Kogawa, Obasan; and Michael Ondaatje, In the Skin of a Lion. Only short texts will be uploaded in StudIP.

Registration: in StudIP (until April 20)

| Kommentar | When the Canadian scholar and writer Robert Kroetsch stated that "identity [...] emerges as the ability to speak in one's own voice [...] in a sense [Canadians] haven't got an identity until somebody tells [their] story", he implicitly referred to the ongoing and multi-faceted attempts to establish a specific national identity, i.e. one that is based on the Canadian notion of multiculturalism, by writing about the country's past. Since this past is marked by migration, the histories of the countries migrants to Canada have come from, may also si- |

gnify. This seminar will explore the importance of history for identity-construction of individuals positioning themselves within the Indian diaspora. Topics addressed in this seminar include: diaspora, trauma, identity, gender, the representation of history; and especially the impact of (Indian) history on identity construction in Canada. We will furthermore investigate whether the prominent form of the contemporary Canadian historical novel, "historiographic metafiction," has been used by South Asian Canadian writers or whether they have had recourse to alternative approaches to writing about history and the intersection of identity, migration and "culture."

Professor Zimmermann will offer a seminar on the same topic and texts at the University of Kiel. Students are expected to connect with their fellow students at other university (through a blog that will be set up and, if possible, through a student conference that will be take place towards the end of the term).

Readings: Anita Rau Badami, Can You Hear the Nightbird Call? (novel); Shauna Singh Baldwin, What the Body Remembers (novel); Bharati Mukherjee, "The Management of Grief" (short story); Anusree Roy, Letters to My Grandma (play); and Padma Viswanathan, Padma, The Ever After of Ashwin Rao (novel).

Students are expected to obtain novels on their own and to have read them (especially the first one) before classes resume.

Kommentar Although the epistolary genre flourished particularly in the 18th century, the tradition of letters in fiction never waned completely in subsequent periods. We will explore the gradual transformation of the genre from the epistolary novel of the past to the contemporary hybrid novel, in which letters, now also in the form of e-mails, play a significant, yet no longer predominant role. Aspects to be considered will be: the writer-addressee relationship; the rendition of subjectivity through letters; the role of letters as objects in the plots; and the function of letter-writing in the tradition of travel narratives.

Readings: Samuel Richardson, Pamela (1742); Henry Fielding, Shamela (1742); Frances Brooke, The History of Emily Montague (1769); Tobias Smollett, Humphry Clinker (1771); Jane Austen, excerpts from Juvenilia and Lady Susan (1805); Bram Stoker, Dracula (1897); and Mary Ann Shaffer, The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society (2008). Optional reading: Nick Bantock, Griffin and Sabine: An Extraordinary Correspondence (1991).

Kommentar In this seminar, we investigate the Canadian Modernist movements in the first half of the twentieth century. If literary Modernism is typically thought of as a break with traditional ways of writing, then Canadian Modernism is furthermore characterized by its negotiation of the regional and the national, the national and the international as well as by its Cosmopolitanism and, partly, its anti-Canadianism. Like most modernist movements, Canadian Modernism spans a wide range of literary genres and different media, including poetry and prose, autobiography and magazines but also painting, architecture, and photography. In this class, we will consider the cultural and literary implications of Canadian Modernism and situate it in its historical context. For our literary analyses, we concentrate on a group of writers known as the Montreal group (or McGill group), including F.R. Scott, Leo Kennedy, and A.J.M. Smith, as well as on works by Dorothy Livesay, E.J. Pratt, and Sheila Watson.

Students are expected to show a basic familiarity with modernism as a literary movement and should be willing to read and discuss a variety of secondary sources and theoretical texts.

Readings: Please get a hold of Sheila Watson's The Double Hook (any edition). All other material will be made available in class.

| Kommentar | The term "Tartan Noir", coined by Ian Rankin, describes a particular brand of contemporary Scottish crime fiction associated with the exploration of urban spaces, the dual nature of identity, a cynical view of politics and an ever eroding boundary between good and evil. It draws on the traditions of Scottish literature, particularly James Hogg's Romantic novel The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner . This course will explore the intertextual connections between Hogg's novel and contemporary Scottish crime fiction by Ian Rankin and Val McDermid. Although we will not discuss R.L. Stevenson's Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde in detail, it is recommended to read the novella for background knowledge. Reading: James Hogg, The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner , ed. Peter Garside, Edinburgh University Press 2002; Val McDermid; The Mermaids Singing , Harper Collins 2015. Ian Rankin, Black and Blue , Orion 2008. |

| Kommentar | What are the right tools to study and understand the true nature of literature? Close reading as a deep analysis of a text's structure and meaning has long been the only answer to this question. Recently, Franco Moretti has challenged this approach with his opposite concept of "distant reading", generating quantitative data with the apparatus of the Digital Humanities. A book-historical approach, taking into account a work's contexts (such as author, publishing history, reception, adaptation etc.) might, as Katie Trumpener has proposed, offer a middle ground between close reading and statistical methods. The course | will introduce students to these three ways of reading literature. Honouring the 2017 Austen Bicentenary, the focus will be on Pride and Prejudice and Mansfield Park. It is obligatory to read both novels before the course begins.

Recommended editions: Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, ed. Vivien Jones, Penguin Classics Annotated Edition or Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, ed. Claudia L. Johnson, Longman Cultural Edition; Jane Austen, Mansfield Park, ed. Kathry Sutherland, Penguin Classics Edition.

| Kommentar | In this seminar, we will discuss the construction of "others" in Victorian texts and illustrations, and how members of these marginalized and often demonized groups are reimagined in contemporary (audio-)visual media. We will investigate the claim that these allegedly monstrous Victorian "others" can be seen as ancestors of the contemporary self. Furthermore, we will examine the travelling of characters, story and discourse, social and cultural values from one century and medium to another. Readings: Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist (excerpts). Will Eisner, Fagin the Jew . Robert Louis Stevenson, Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde . Alan Moore & Kevin O'Neill, The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen , Vols. I and II. John Logan (writ., prod.), Penny Dreadful (excerpts). | Kommentar | This course explores the concept of intermediality, its subcategories and related terms. We will particularly discuss the intrinsic intermedial qualities of two media, comics and film. Furthermore, we will use the concept of medial transposition as the starting point for approaching comic-to-film adaptations. Throughout the course, we will build up a toolbox for critically examining the (audio-) visual content of the two media (e.g. close reading of visual texts, analysis of film technique). Readings: Bryan Talbot, Alice in Sunderland: An Entertainment . Alan Moore & David Lloyd: V for Vendetta . James McTeigue (dir.), V for Vendetta , 2006. | Kommentar | For more than two decades Native Canadian writer Thomas King (*1943) has addressed issues of the First Nations in his novels, short stories and essays. With his satirical and postmodern writing style, he has uncovered the underlying racism towards the indigenous population which is still present in postcolonial societies. By doing so, he challenges Canada's cultural identity as a multicultural, open and just society. The course seeks to examine a selection of Thomas King's short stories, his children's book A Coyote Columbus Story (1992) and his famous novel Green Grass, Running Water (1993). Topics include - among others - Native mythology (especially the notion of the Trickster), Native and non-Native cultural identity in Canada, Magical Realism and Postmodernism Students are expected to get a copy of Thomas King's short story collection A Short History of Indians and Canada (2005, Harper) his novel Green Grass, Running Water (1993, Bantham Book), and his children's book A Coyote Columbus Story (1992, Groundwood Books) prior to the course. Any other text will be provided by the instructor. Online Chat Sessions: Mondays, 5-7 pm (CEST). | Kommentar | This class sets out to trace the project of Pearl S. Buck (1892-1973), a woman writer of worldwide recognition at her time who later on fell into oblivion. Born as the daughter of American missionaries, Pearl Buck lived the first half of her life in a bilingual environment in China and spent the rest of her life travelling back and forth between the United States and China. |

ween the United States and Asia. She led a career that extended well beyond her eighty works of fiction and nonfiction and deep into the public (political) sphere. Passionately committed to the cause of social justice, Buck was active in the American civil rights and women's rights movements, and founded the first international adoption agency. Pearl Buck was an advocate of racial understanding and a vital cultural ambassador between the United States and China. Her socio-political activism made her one of the most interesting figures to influence American and Chinese cultural and literary history in the 20th century. Today, she is best known for her novel The Good Earth (1931), which won a Nobel Prize as well as a Pulitzer, but also the rest of her oeuvre is very much characterized by her attempt to create what might be called a distinct 'American China.'

In this class, we will discuss the project of this fascinating and controversial writer against the backdrop of its negotiation of diasporic experience, concepts of the 'self' and the 'other,' as well as its positioning in the context of middlebrow studies.

Class readings (such as excerpts and essays of Buck's project) will be provided in a reader at the beginning of the semester; but you need to purchase the three novels which we will read in full length. These are Pearl S. Buck's The Good Earth (Washington Square Press), East Wind, West Wind (Moyer Bell), and Kinfolk (Moyer Bell). Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library.

| Kommentar | The reading list for this seminar includes biographies, autobiographies, reports, theoretical discussions, and fictional accounts of refugees. It would be possible to extend the list backwards in time. Indeed, a case can be made that some of the earliest examples of American literature were refugee narratives, for instance Bradford's account of leaving the old world for New England under conditions of religious persecution. However, there are good reasons for thinking about refugees in relation to the modern, or even the twentieth- and twenty-first century nation-state. Recent attempts to define the nation in terms of race or religion have resulted in violence and expulsion. The concept of universal human rights, devised to protect displaced persons and asylum seekers from the worst ravages of nationalism, has repeatedly run up against the problem that the universal has no jurisdiction. Refugee narratives can be understood as attempts to establish jurisdictions of the imagination. They express the longing to belong, challenge the exclusionary alignment of nation and narration, and explore the potential connections between narration and naturalization. This seminar will begin with narratives from the 1940s and move forward to contemporary conflicts. |

Kommentar In this seminar, we investigate the Canadian Modernist movements in the first half of the twentieth century. If literary Modernism is typically thought of as a break with traditional ways of writing, then Canadian Modernism is furthermore characterized by its negotiation of the regional and the national, the national and the international as well as by its Cosmopolitanism and, partly, its anti-Canadianism. Like most modernist movements, Canadian Modernism spans a wide range of literary genres and different media, including poetry and prose, autobiography and magazines but also painting, architecture, and photography. In this class, we will consider the cultural and literary implications of Canadian Modernism and situate it in its historical context. For our literary analyses, we concentrate on a group of writers known as the Montreal group (or McGill group), including F.R. Scott, Leo Kennedy, and A.J.M. Smith, as well as on works by Dorothy Livesay, E.J. Pratt, and Sheila Watson.

Students are expected to show a basic familiarity with modernism as a literary movement and should be willing to read and discuss a variety of secondary sources and theoretical texts.

Readings: Please get a hold of Sheila Watson's The Double Hook (any edition). All other material will be made available in class.

| Kommentar | In this course, we will engage with the ways in which narratives and art works prompt readers and audiences to imagine fictional worlds. Starting from the presumption that world building largely depends on the reader's or viewer's imagination, conjecture, and emotional investment, we will engage with the following questions: How do readers immerse themselves in what they read? How do they come to inhabit the life worlds of characters—even if these are set in distant places, present different cultures or nonhuman creatures? How do the episodes and seasons of television narratives gradually build up and prompt us to imagine increasingly complex universes? In which ways do readers and audiences actively take part in creating these worlds? We will address these questions by considering short stories, novels, and serial narratives across different media: literature, film, television, and contemporary art. In order to approach world building systematically, we engage with relevant theoretical texts ranging from narrative theory, reader-response criticism, literary anthropology to theories of seriality and audience studies. We will discuss Mikhail Bahktin's essay on the chronotope, a chapter from Wolfgang Iser's The Fictive and the Imaginary, David Herman's "Narrative Ways of Worldmaking," Hannah Meretoja's essay "Narrative and Human Existence," and Robyn Warhol and Susan Lanser's contribution to a queer narratology. Primary texts include Ta-Nehisi Coates's Between the World and Me (2015), a memoir of growing up as a black boy, trying to find his place in the world; short stories by Lucia Berlin, Jennifer Egan, Lauren Groff, and George Saunders; an excerpt from Alexander Horowitz's Being a Dog (2016). We will also discuss the Netflix series Orange is the New Black (2013-) and Piper Kerman's memoir of the same title on her "year in a women's prison," that the series is based on. An excursion to the upcoming documenta 14 in Kassel (10 June—17 Sep 2017) will constitute a relevant component of the seminar: much of contemporary art deals with the state of our social world and planet—from the refugee crisis and poverty to climate change and the Anthropocene. |

Please note:

All students signing up for the course agree to participate in an excursion to the documenta 14 in Kassel, which will open on June 10, 2017. Students will prepare introductions to selected artists; we will plan the visit together once the program is available. In case SQM-funds are granted as applied, students' tickets for the documenta will be covered

(the decision is still pending). The date of the excursion will be announced (most likely a Friday or Saturday).

| Kommentar | In this course we will focus on the syntax and semantics of Quantifier Raising and overt movement: the fact that a sentence like "Some student talked to every teacher" has a reading where the object takes higher scope than the subject. We will discuss novel approaches that look at the theory behind this phenomenon and we will discuss various experiments that have been carried out to investigate this. |

| Kommentar | "Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Great men are almost always bad men." (Baron John E. E. D. Acton, 1887) "The road to power is paved with hypocrisy, and casualties. Never regret." (Frank Underwood, 2014) In this course, students will engage with theories of governance alongside the literary reception of selected rulers of the premodern era. Our focus will be split between political philosophy from Plato to Machiavelli and biblical/medieval literature describing and assessing the actions of such historical and legendary rulers as the Pharaoh of Exodus, Ahab and Jezebel, David, Solomon, Nero, Theoderic, Alfred, Edgar I, and Æthelred II. The work will involve a modest amount of translation from Old English as well as a presentation in the lead-up to the final assessment (exam or term paper); the main emphasis of the homework will be on the reading and interpretation of texts made available in Modern English translations. Please pick up Tim Parks's translation of Machiavelli's Prince (Penguin, EUR 7) and read at least the introduction ahead of term! |

| Kommentar | The colloquium invites advanced students who are preparing or already working on their B.A. or M.A. thesis or some other project. It will provide the opportunity to present and discuss your work in progress and receive valuable feedback. Further sessions will be on academic writing, research, and current developments in cultural, literary, and media studies as well as critical theory. | |

The course gives students the opportunity to suggest specific topics and/or theoretical texts relevant to the field of North American Studies and/or your own research projects, which may be taken up in individual class discussions. If you have a particular topic or text in mind that you want to propose for discussion, please send an email to Prof. Tischleider before the beginning of the semester. Suggestions are also welcome in the first week of the semester.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact the instructor before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we also recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 March and 01 April 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

The colloquium is designed to help BA- and MA-level students who are in the process of writing—or thinking about—the theses (BA-Arbeit/MA-Arbeit) necessary for the completion of their degrees. Students will have the opportunity to present their work-in-progress to their peers. Many sessions will be devoted to discussing student work. Other sessions will deal with topics in academic research and writing. We will also discuss current trends and methods in American studies and in critical theory. Students are invited to propose their own topics and texts for general discussion. Please get your suggestions to me as soon as possible so I can try to include them in the syllabus.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Kommentar

This course is for all three modules. It is obligatory for Module 12 a: students who wish to familiarize themselves with literary events within the framework of Module M.EP.12a. We will look at the literature industry and the various events, which it offers.

It is also obligatory for Module 12 b: the colloquium is also meant for students who will be doing an internship in Germany or Britain (Modules M.EP. 12b). It aims to help students prepare for their placements across the literature industry and gives them guidance for their required work.

The course is elective for Module 12 c: students who wish to do a placement within the framework of module 12 c may take this course to help prepare for their placements and to gain a deeper insight into the literature industry. Students taking it as an elective do not receive credit.

The course syllabus will be tailored to the specific needs of the participants. We will meet on a regular basis and reserve a couple of weekends for the Blockseminare at the end of the semester during which students will give their presentations. Please be sure to bring your calendars and schedules with you to the first meeting.

Reading: Readings will be available for download on StudIP.

Registration: via StudIP until 21.04.17.

Dealing with such a simple product only consisting of ink on paper, the book or literature industry has played a critical role in enabling the world to advance to how we know it today. Driven by new technologies and influenced by various factors, it is undergoing change today. This course will examine the literature industry, from its beginnings until today, the factors, which helped shape it and its underlying practices; aiming to answer the overall question: What is the business of literature? We will begin by looking at the relationships of authors, readers and texts. Dealing with theoretical background, we will also look at how it developed historically. Furthermore, this course will also provide an overview of the buying, selling and writing of books as well as its close ties with marketing and consumption of literature.

Reading: Readings will be available for download on StudIP.

Registration: via StudIP until 18.04.17.

This course is for all three modules. It is obligatory for Module 12 a: students who wish to familiarize themselves with literary events within the framework of Module M.EP.12a. We will look at the literature industry and the various events, which it offers.

It is also obligatory for Module 12 b: the colloquium is also meant for students who will be doing an internship in Germany or Britain (Modules M.EP. 12b). It aims to help students prepare for their placements across the literature industry and gives them guidance for their required work.

The course is elective for Module 12 c: students who wish to do a placement within the framework of module 12 c may take this course to help prepare for their placements and to gain a deeper insight into the literature industry. Students taking it as an elective do not receive credit.

The course syllabus will be tailored to the specific needs of the participants. We will meet on a regular basis and reserve a couple of weekends for the Blockseminare at the end of the semester during which students will give their presentations. Please be sure to bring your calendars and schedules with you to the first meeting.

Kommentar

This class sets out to trace the project of Pearl S. Buck (1892-1973), a woman writer of worldwide recognition at her time who later on fell into oblivion.

Born as the daughter of American missionaries, Pearl Buck lived the first half of her life in a bilingual environment in China and spent the rest of her life travelling back and forth between the United States and Asia. She led a career that extended well beyond her eighty works of fiction and nonfiction and deep into the public (political) sphere. Passionately committed to the cause of social justice, Buck was active in the American civil rights and women's rights movements, and founded the first international adoption agency. Pearl Buck was an advocate of racial understanding and a vital cultural ambassador between the United States and China. Her socio-political activism made her one of the most interesting figures to influence American and Chinese cultural and literary history in the 20th century. Today, she is best known for her novel The Good Earth (1931), which won a Nobel Prize as well as a Pulitzer, but also the rest of her oeuvre is very much characterized by her attempt to create what might be called a distinct 'American China.'

In this class, we will discuss the project of this fascinating and controversial writer against the backdrop of its negotiation of diasporic experience, concepts of the 'self' and the 'other,' as well as its positioning in the context of middlebrow studies.

Class readings (such as excerpts and essays of Buck's project) will be provided in a reader at the beginning of the semester; but you need to purchase the three novels which we will read in full length. These are Pearl S. Buck's The Good Earth (Washington Square Press), East Wind, West Wind (Moyer Bell), and Kinfolk (Moyer Bell). Further secondary literature will be made available on the reserve shelf in the library.

Registration: Attendance for this class is limited to 30 students. Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 March and 01 April 2017 is required. Kommentar The reading list for this seminar includes biographies, autobiographies, reports, theoretical discussions, and fictional accounts of refugees. It would be possible to extend the list backwards in time. Indeed, a case can be made that some of the earliest examples of American literature were refugee narratives, for instance Bradford's account of leaving the old world for New England under conditions of religious persecution. However, there are good reasons for thinking about refugees in relation to the modern, or even the twentieth- and twenty-first century nation-state. Recent attempts to define the nation in terms of race or religion have resulted in violence and expulsion. The concept of universal human rights, devised to protect displaced persons and asylum seekers from the worst ravages of nationalism, has repeatedly run up against the problem that the universal has no jurisdiction. Refugee narratives can be understood as attempts to establish jurisdictions of the imagination. They express the longing to belong, challenge the exclusionary alignment of nation and narration, and explore the potential connections between narration and naturalization. This seminar will begin with narratives from the 1940s and move forward to contemporary conflicts.

Readings:

- W.H. Auden, "Refugee Blues" (to be provided)
Hannah Arendt, excerpts from The Origins of Totalitarianism (to be provided)
Alfred Kazin, selections from New York Jew (to be provided)

Kommentar When the Canadian scholar and writer Robert Kroetsch stated that "identity [...] emerges as the ability to speak in one's own voice [...] in a sense [Canadians] haven't got an identity until somebody tells [their] story", he implicitly referred to the ongoing and multi-faceted attempts to establish a specific national identity, i.e. one that is based on the Canadian notion of multiculturalism, by writing about the country's past. Since this past is marked by migration, the histories of the country's migrants to Canada have come from, may also signify. This seminar will explore the importance of history for identity-construction of individuals positioning themselves within the Indian diaspora. Topics addressed in this seminar include: diaspora, trauma, identity, gender, the representation of history; and especially the impact of (Indian) history on identity construction in Canada. We will furthermore investigate whether the prominent form of the contemporary Canadian historical novel, "historiographic metafiction," has been used by South Asian Canadian writers or whether they have had recourse to alternative approaches to writing about history and the intersection of identity, migration and "culture."

Professor Zimmermann will offer a seminar on the same topic and texts at the University of Kiel. Students are expected to connect with their fellow students at other university (through a blog that will be set up and, if possible, through a student conference that will be take place towards the end of the term).

Readings: Anita Rau Badami, Can You Hear the Nightbird Call? (novel); Shauna Singh Baldwin, What the Body Remembers (novel); Bharati Mukherjee, "The Management of Grief" (short story); Anusree Roy, Letters to My Grandma (play); and Padma Viswanathan, Padma, The Ever After of Ashwin Rao (novel).

Students are expected to obtain novels on their own and to have read them (especially the first one) before classes resume.

In this seminar, we investigate the Canadian Modernist movements in the first half of the twentieth century. If literary Modernism is typically thought of as a break with traditional ways of writing, then Canadian Modernism is furthermore characterized by its negotiation of the regional and the national, the national and the international as well as by its Cosmopolitanism and, partly, its anti-Canadianism. Like most modernist movements, Canadian Modernism spans a wide range of literary genres and different media, including poetry and prose, autobiography and magazines but also painting, architecture, and photography. In this class, we will consider the cultural and literary implications of Canadian Modernism and situate it in its historical context. For our literary analyses, we concentrate on a group of writers known as the Montreal group (or McGill group), including F.R. Scott,

Leo Kennedy, and A.J.M- Smith, as well as on works by Dorothy Livesay, E.J. Pratt, and Sheila Watson.

Students are expected to show a basic familiarity with modernism as a literary movement and should be willing to read and discuss a variety of secondary sources and theoretical texts.

Readings: Please get a hold of Sheila Watson's The Double Hook (any edition). All other material will be made available in class.

The colloquium invites advanced students who are preparing or already working on their B.A. or M.A. thesis or some other project. It will provide the opportunity to present and discuss your work in progress and receive valuable feedback. Further sessions will be on academic writing, research, and current developments in cultural, literary, and media studies as well as critical theory.

The course gives students the opportunity to suggest specific topics and/or theoretical texts relevant to the field of North American Studies and/or your own research projects, which may be taken up in individual class discussions. If you have a particular topic or text in mind that you want to propose for discussion, please send an email to Prof. Tischleder before the beginning of the semester. Suggestions are also welcome in the first week of the semester.

If you wish to take this colloquium as part of your "fachwissenschaftliche Vertiefung" (B.AS.09; B.AS.501) or as part of your "Master-Abschlussmodul" (M.AS.04 or M.EP.6b), please come to the instructor's office hours well in advance.

Students who wish to take this class as part of module M.EP.09b and who need to write a 'Forschungsbericht' as a 'Prüfungsleistung' in this module, too, are asked to contact the instructor before the beginning of the semester.

Please also note that we also recommend to take this colloquium as a voluntary component of module B.EP.51, i.e., before you prepare your B.A. thesis in North American Studies. While you will not be given credit for the colloquium in the context of this module, participation is still highly recommended.

Registration: Binding (!) registration on Stud.IP between 01 March and 01 April 2017 is required. All news concerning this class will be posted on Stud.IP. For final registration, participants need to attend the first session of class.

Kommentar

In this course, we will engage with the ways in which narratives and art works prompt readers and audiences to imagine fictional worlds. Starting from the presumption that world building largely depends on the reader's or viewer's imagination, conjecture, and emotional investment, we will engage with the following questions: How do readers immerse themselves in what they read? How do they come to inhabit the life worlds of characters—even if these are set in distant places, present different cultures or nonhuman creatures? How do the episodes and seasons of television narratives gradually build up and prompt us to imagine increasingly complex universes? In which ways do readers and audiences actively take part in creating these worlds?

We will address these questions by considering short stories, novels, and serial narratives across different media: literature, film, television, and contemporary art. In order to approach world building systematically, we engage with relevant theoretical texts ranging from narrative theory, reader-response criticism, literary anthropology to theories of seriality and audience studies. We will discuss Mikhail Bakhtin's essay on the chronotope, a chapter from Wolfgang Iser's The Fictive and the Imaginary, David Herman's "Narrative Ways of Worldmaking," Hannah Meretoja's essay "Narrative and Human Existence," and Robyn Warhol and Susan Lanser's contribution to a queer narratology.

Primary texts include Ta-Nehisi Coates's Between the World and Me (2015), a memoir of growing up as a black boy, trying to find his place in the world; short stories by Lucia Berlin, Jennifer Egan, Lauren Groff, and George Saunders; an excerpt from Alexander Horowitz's Being a Dog (2016). We will also discuss the Netflix series Orange is the New Black (2013-) and Piper Kerman's memoir of the same title on her "year in a women's prison," that the series is based on. An excursion to the upcoming documenta 14 in Kassel (10 June—17 Sep 2017) will constitute a relevant component of the seminar: much of contemporary art deals with the state of our social world and planet—from the refugee crisis and poverty to climate change and the Anthropocene.

Please note:

All students signing up for the course agree to participate in an excursion to the documenta 14 in Kassel, which will open on June 10, 2017. Students will prepare introductions to selected artists; we will plan the visit together once the program is available. In case SQM-funds are granted as applied, students' tickets for the documenta will be covered (the decision is still pending). The date of the excursion will be announced (most likely a Friday or Saturday).

Please acquire copies of the following paperback editions, so that we'll have identical page numbers, and read them in advance:

- Ta-Nehisi Coates, Between the World and Me (2015); Textpublishing, ISBN 978-1925240702
- Piper Kerman, Orange is the New Black: My Time in a Women's Prison, Spiegel & Grau, ISBN 978-0385523394

| Kommentar | This course is primarily meant for students preparing or writing a Bachelor or Master thesis in linguistics. The idea of the course is twofold. First, you will get help with some formal details. We will for instance address questions such as How can I find a topic in linguistics? , How can I organize my working? How should I structure my paper? We will read and discuss some helpful papers on linguistic theory and methodological issues. Second, you should have a forum where we might discuss papers you are interested in or you can present own ideas. Candidates may give a short talk concerning purpose, structure and first parts of their work to get some feedback from other participants in class in a relaxed atmosphere without any stress. According to the examination regulations for the Master program and the Master of Education program students are obliged to attend the colloquium as part of their Abschlussmodul . Of course every student interested in the issues mentioned above is invited to attend this class and join us. |

| Kommentar | "Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely. Great men are almost always bad men." (Baron John E. E. D. Acton, 1887) "The road to power is paved with hypocrisy, and casualties. Never regret." (Frank Underwood, 2014) | In this course, students will engage with theories of governance alongside the literary reception of selected rulers of the premodern era. Our focus will be split between political philosophy from Plato to Machiavelli and biblical/medieval literature describing and assessing the actions of such historical and legendary rulers as the Pharaoh of Exodus, Ahab and Jezebel, David, Solomon, Nero, Theoderic, Alfred, Edgar I, and Æthelred II. The work will involve a modest amount of translation from Old English as well as a presentation in the lead-up to the final assessment (exam or term paper); the main emphasis of the homework will be on the reading and interpretation of texts made available in Modern English translations. Please pick up Tim Parks's translation of Machiavelli's Prince (Penguin, EUR 7) and read at least the introduction ahead of term! |

Kommentar This is an intermediate - advanced English language course (Vertiefungsmodul). The main aim of the course is to increase and improve your active vocabulary in selected fields, e.g. politics, idioms, travel and transport, medical English, and the media. In class, you will be asked to give a presentation on your selected field and to encourage class participants to learn the new vocabulary by actively using it in class, e.g. in a dialogue, cloze text, role play, etc. In addition, we will also focus on various aspects of vocabulary and vocab learning, e.g. translation, example, special features, etc. The course book is Advanced Vocabulary in Use, Michael McCarthy, Felicity O'Dell, but you do not need to buy it - there are copies in the departmental library. N.B. You must be registered on FlexNow to pass the course even if there is no final test!

| Kommentar | "Wait, there's one I remember from when I was at school. How did it go..." Who does not know the unfortunate attempts to recall a poem by actually trying to say it? With the speaker's eyes turned upwards and the verses rattled, hardly any more is left over of a poem than of Mozart or Vivaldi in a ringtone. In theory and practice, we will address the question of how to recite poetry to an audience with basically two goals to be achieved: the audience is to remember what they have just heard, and they are to receive an impression of a poem's aesthetic quality and artistic content. We will first analyse a poetic text as to its meter, prosody, syntax, content and emotion, and will then, in a second step, develop an appropriate form of performance. The class is intended to be concluded with a public performance, presumably at the ThOP. The course aims at students who wish to improve their ability to speak in front of audiences and have an interest in poetry and its recitation. They should be prepared not only to analyse poems but also to memorize and recite them. | |

This is an intermediate - advanced English language course (Vertiefungsmodul). The main aim of the course is to increase and improve your active vocabulary in selected fields, e.g. politics, idioms, travel and transport, medical English, and the media. In class, you will be asked to give a presentation on your selected field and to encourage class participants to learn the new vocabulary by actively using it in class, e.g. in a dialogue, cloze text, role play, etc. In addition, we will also focus on various aspects of vocabulary and vocab learning, e.g. translation, example, special features, etc. The course book is Advanced Vocabulary in Use, Michael McCarthy, Felicity O'Dell, but you do not need to buy it - there are copies in the departmental library. N.B. You must be registered on FlexNow to pass the course even if there is no final test!

This course is designed to give participants of the Edinburgh Summer School 2017 an overview of key features of Scottish life and institutions both as they are today and with a view to their historical developments. The class will consist of discussions of set texts and 'field trips' to relevant places for a more hands-on experience of the topics involved.

Participation in this course is restricted to those students who are registered for the Summer School.

Exam types:

BA: 4 quizzes, two of these must be passed.

MA: Presentation with handout (approx. 30 mins).

| Kommentar | We will attempt to find themes, motifs, and resonances within the tradition of public American rhetoric from colonial times to the present day. From John Winthrop and Jonathan Edwards to Martin Luther King, Jr., and Barack Obama, there have been reiterations of specific ideas regarding what America means and represents in the American mind. What are they? Special attention will be given to Abraham Lincoln and his particular importance within this tradition. We will emphasize the sermons and speeches themselves rather than secondary sources, so that we can attempt to grasp the cadences of American rhetoric within the context of both history and the American language as a whole. | |

| Kommentar | This course will cover a range of strategies for improving your reading skills, such as speed and detailed reading, and skimming and scanning practice; it will also cover listening skills, such as following longer talks on unfamiliar topics and coping with different accents. We will answer various types of comprehension questions, take notes, write summaries and learn new vocabulary by engaging with contemporary issues. For that purpose, we will draw on both digital and print media (NPR, BBC, TED and The Guardian, The New York Times, The Washington Post etc.), which will serve as our material. The final exam will be based on a reading task and a listening task (i.e. a short podcast and a thematically related article). | |

The course takes place on a weekly basis and materials will be provided. Registration is via studip.

| Kommentar | "Wait, there's one I remember from when I was at school. How did it go..." Who does not know the unfortunate attempts to recall a poem by actually trying to say it? With the speaker's eyes turned upwards and the verses rattled, hardly any more is left over of a poem than of Mozart or Vivaldi in a ringtone. In theory and practice, we will address the question of how to recite poetry to an audience with basically two goals to be achieved: the audience is to remember what they have just heard, and they are to receive an impression of a poem's aesthetic quality and artistic content. We will first analyse a poetic text as to its meter, prosody, syntax, content and emotion, and will then, in a second step, develop an appropriate form of performance. The class is intended to be concluded with a public performance, presumably at the ThOP. The course aims at students who wish to improve their ability to speak in front of audiences and have an interest in poetry and its recitation. They should be prepared not only to analyse poems but also to memorize and recite them. | |

"What does it mean to be "Canadian"?" and "How could one define "Canadian literature"?" These are questions that, along with background knowledge on Canadian society and culture, this lecture series is meant to provide. Apart from surveying the development of Canada towards nationhood and then on towards its endorsement of multiculturalism as an official policy and its flirtation with ideas of the transnationalism, lectures will focus on issues of cultural contact and intercultural exchange, the role of culture in nation-building, Canadian literature's preoccupation with history and mythology, and its preferred form of historiographic metafiction, as well as Canada's self-promotion as a country open to immigrants while confronting accusations of marginalisation and racialization.

Readings: articles on Canada and Canadian writing; selected poems and short fiction; the play The Rez Sisters by Tomson Highway; the graphic narrative Riel by Chester Brown (excerpts) and the following novels: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (excerpts); Timothy Findley, The Wars, Joy Kogawa, Obasan; and Michael Ondaatje, In the Skin of a Lion. Only short texts will be uploaded in StudIP.

Dealing with such a simple product only consisting of ink on paper, the book or literature industry has played a critical role in enabling the world to advance to how we know it today. Driven by new technologies and influenced by various factors, it is undergoing change today. This course will examine the literature industry, from its beginnings until today, the factors, which helped shape it and its underlying practices; aiming to answer the overall question: What is the business of literature? We will begin by looking at the relationships of authors, readers and texts. Dealing with theoretical background, we will also look at how it developed historically. Furthermore, this course will also provide an overview of the buying, selling and writing of books as well as its close ties with marketing and consumption of literature.

Reading: Readings will be available for download on StudIP.

Registration: via StudIP until 18.04.17.

Kommentar

The colonial rule over India greatly informed British literature of the 19th, 20th and 21st centuries. These diverse narratives served as an instrument for spreading the colonial ideology and the particular interest in India among the British. In this project-oriented seminar, we will explore how India was represented in the diverse literatures of Britain particularly during the late 20th and early 21st centuries. By doing so, the course aims at developing e-learning modules on the reception of India in European narratives.

Within smaller task force groups, students will be guided in research methods and work with primary, as well as secondary sources in order to prepare these for the e-learning modules.

The course will train research skills as well as intensive text-based work that will help improve writing and reading skills.

Readings: As the seminar focuses on a very wide range of literatures, no readings are indicated at this point. Instead they will be provided to the individual groups at the beginning of the course.

Kommentar When the Canadian scholar and writer Robert Kroetsch stated that "identity [...] emerges as the ability to speak in one's own voice [...] in a sense [Canadians] haven't got an identity until somebody tells [their] story", he implicitly referred to the ongoing and multi-faceted attempts to establish a specific national identity, i.e. one that is based on the Canadian notion of multiculturalism, by writing about the country's past. Since this past is marked by migration, the histories of the country's migrants to Canada have come from, may also signify. This seminar will explore the importance of history for identity-construction of individuals positioning themselves within the Indian diaspora. Topics addressed in this seminar include: diaspora, trauma, identity, gender, the representation of history; and especially the impact of (Indian) history on identity construction in Canada. We will furthermore investigate whether the prominent form of the contemporary Canadian historical novel, "historiographic metafiction," has been used by South Asian Canadian writers or whether they have had recourse to alternative approaches to writing about history and the intersection of identity, migration and "culture."

Professor Zimmermann will offer a seminar on the same topic and texts at the University of Kiel. Students are expected to connect with their fellow students at other university (through a blog that will be set up and, if possible, through a student conference that will be take place towards the end of the term).

Readings: Anita Rau Badami, Can You Hear the Nightbird Call? (novel); Shauna Singh Baldwin, What the Body Remembers (novel); Bharati Mukherjee, "The Management of Grief" (short story); Anusree Roy, Letters to My Grandma (play); and Padma Viswanathan, Padma, The Ever After of Ashwin Rao (novel).

Students are expected to obtain novels on their own and to have read them (especially the first one) before classes resume.

| Kommentar | Although the epistolary genre flourished particularly in the 18 th century, the tradition of letters in fiction never waned completely in subsequent periods. We will explore the gradual transformation of the genre from the epistolary novel of the past to the contemporary hybrid novel, in which letters, now also in the form of e-mails, play a significant, yet no longer predominant role. Aspects to be considered will be: the writer-addressee relationship; the rendition of subjectivity through letters; the role of letters as objects in the plots; and the function of letter-writing in the tradition of travel narratives. |

In this seminar, we investigate the Canadian Modernist movements in the first half of the twentieth century. If literary Modernism is typically thought of as a break with traditional ways of writing, then Canadian Modernism is furthermore characterized by its negotiation of the regional and the national, the national and the international as well as by its Cosmopolitanism and, partly, its anti-Canadianism. Like most modernist movements, Canadian Modernism spans a wide range of literary genres and different media, including poetry and prose, autobiography and magazines but also painting, architecture, and photography. In this class, we will consider the cultural and literary implications of Canadian Modernism and situate it in its historical context. For our literary analyses, we concentrate on a group of writers known as the Montreal group (or McGill group), including F.R. Scott, Leo Kennedy, and A.J.M. Smith, as well as on works by Dorothy Livesay, E.J. Pratt, and Sheila Watson.

Students are expected to show a basic familiarity with modernism as a literary movement and should be willing to read and discuss a variety of secondary sources and theoretical texts.

Readings: Please get a hold of Sheila Watson's The Double Hook (any edition). All other material will be made available in class.

| Kommentar | What are the right tools to study and understand the true nature of literature? Close reading as a deep analysis of a text's structure and meaning has long been the only answer to this question. Recently, Franco Moretti has challenged this approach with his opposite concept of "distant reading", generating quantitative data with the apparatus of the Digital Humanities. A book-historical approach, taking into account a work's contexts (such as author, publishing history, reception, adaptation etc.) might, as Katie Trumpener has proposed, offer a middle ground between close reading and statistical methods. The course will introduce students to these three ways of reading literature. Honouring the 2017 Austen Bicentenary, the focus will be on Pride and Prejudice and Mansfield Park . It is obligatory to read both novels before the course begins. | |

This lecture series aims to give a broad introduction to the literature and culture of the long eighteenth-century in Britain, starting with the Restoration Period and ending with Romanticism. Topics will cover aspects of cultural history (e.g. the metropolis London; the age of revolutions), philosophy (The Enlightenment), and literature (epic, drama, novel, satire and poetry). In the light of the Jane-Austen-Bicentenary in 2017, a particular focus will be on the works of Jane Austen.

Recommended background reading: Paul Langford, Eighteenth-Century Britain: A Very Short Introduction (Oxford, 2000); James Sambrook, The Eighteenth Century: The Intellectual and Cultural Context of English Literature 1700-1789. London and New York, 1986.

A reading list for BA and MA students will be uploaded on StudIP.

Registration in StudIP until 14 April.

| Kommentar | "What does it mean to be "Canadian"?" and "How could one define "Canadian literature"?" These are questions that, along with background knowledge on Canadian society and culture, this lecture series is meant to provide. Apart from surveying the development of Canada towards nationhood and then on towards its endorsement of multiculturalism as an official policy and its flirtation with ideas of the transnationalism, lectures will focus on issues of cultural contact and intercultural exchange, the role of culture in nation-building, Canadian literature's preoccupation with history and mythology, and its preferred form of historiographic metafiction, as well as Canada's self-promotion as a country open to immigrants while confronting accusations of marginalisation and racialization. |

Readings: articles on Canada and Canadian writing; selected poems and short fiction; the play The Rez Sisters by Tomson Highway; the graphic narrative Riel by Chester Brown (excerpts) and the following novels: Lucy Maud Montgomery, Anne of Green Gables (excerpts); Timothy Findley, The Wars, Joy Kogawa, Obasan; and Michael Ondaatje, In the Skin of a Lion. Only short texts will be uploaded in StudIP.

Registration: in StudIP (until April 20)

When the Canadian scholar and writer Robert Kroetsch stated that "identity [...] emerges as the ability to speak in one's own voice [...] in a sense [Canadians] haven't got an identity until somebody tells [their] story", he implicitly referred to the ongoing and multi-faceted attempts to establish a specific national identity, i.e. one that is based on the Canadian notion of multiculturalism, by writing about the country's past. Since this past is marked by migration, the histories of the countries migrants to Canada have come from, may also signify. This seminar will explore the importance of history for identity-construction of individuals positioning themselves within the Indian diaspora. Topics addressed in this seminar include: diaspora, trauma, identity, gender, the representation of history; and especially the impact of (Indian) history on identity construction in Canada. We will furthermore investigate whether the prominent form of the contemporary Canadian historical novel, "historiographic metafiction," has been used by South Asian Canadian writers or whether they have had recourse to alternative approaches to writing about history and the intersection of identity, migration and "culture."

Professor Zimmermann will offer a seminar on the same topic and texts at the University of Kiel. Students are expected to connect with their fellow students at other university (through a blog that will be set up and, if possible, through a student conference that will be take place towards the end of the term).

Readings: Anita Rau Badami, Can You Hear the Nightbird Call? (novel); Shauna Singh Baldwin, What the Body Remembers (novel); Bharati Mukherjee, "The Management of Grief" (short story); Anusree Roy, Letters to My Grandma (play); and Padma Viswanathan, Padma, The Ever After of Ashwin Rao (novel).

Students are expected to obtain novels on their own and to have read them (especially the first one) before classes resume.

Although the epistolary genre flourished particularly in the 18th century, the tradition of letters in fiction never waned completely in subsequent periods. We will explore the gradual transformation of the genre from the epistolary novel of the past to the contemporary hybrid novel, in which letters, now also in the form of e-mails, play a significant, yet no longer predominant role. Aspects to be considered will be: the writer-addressee relationship; the rendition of subjectivity through letters; the role of letters as objects in the plots; and the function of letter-writing in the tradition of travel narratives.

Readings: Samuel Richardson, Pamela (1742); Henry Fielding, Shamela (1742); Frances Brooke, The History of Emily Montague (1769); Tobias Smollett, Humphry Clinker (1771); Jane Austen, excerpts from Juvenilia and Lady Susan (1805); Bram Stoker, Dracula (1897); and Mary Ann Shaffer, The Guernsey Literary and Potato Peel Pie Society (2008). Optional reading: Nick Bantock, Griffin and Sabine: An Extraordinary Correspondence (1991).

The term "Tartan Noir", coined by Ian Rankin, describes a particular brand of contemporary Scottish crime fiction associated with the exploration of urban spaces, the dual nature of identity, a cynical view of politics and an ever eroding boundary between good and evil. It draws on the traditions of Scottish literature, particularly James Hogg's Romantic novel The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner. This course will explore the intertextual connections between Hogg's novel and contemporary Scottish crime fiction by Ian Rankin and Val McDermid. Although we will not discuss R.L. Stevenson's Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde in detail, it is recommended to read the novella for background knowledge.

Reading: James Hogg, The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner, ed. Peter Garside, Edinburgh University Press 2002; Val McDermid; The Mermaids Singing, Harper Collins 2015. Ian Rankin, Black and Blue, Orion 2008.

Kommentar When the Canadian scholar and writer Robert Kroetsch stated that "identity [...] emerges as the ability to speak in one's own voice [...] in a sense [Canadians] haven't got an identity until somebody tells [their] story", he implicitly referred to the ongoing and multi-faceted attempts to establish a specific national identity, i.e. one that is based on the Canadian notion of multiculturalism, by writing about the country's past. Since this past is marked by migration, the histories of the countries migrants to Canada have come from, may also signify. This seminar will explore the importance of history for identity-construction of individuals positioning themselves within the Indian diaspora. Topics addressed in this seminar include: diaspora, trauma, identity, gender, the representation of history; and especially the impact of (Indian) history on identity construction in Canada. We will furthermore investigate whether the prominent form of the contemporary Canadian historical novel, "historiographic metafiction," has been used by South Asian Canadian writers or whether they have had recourse to alternative approaches to writing about history and the intersection of identity, migration and "culture."

Professor Zimmermann will offer a seminar on the same topic and texts at the University of Kiel. Students are expected to connect with their fellow students at other university (through a blog that will be set up and, if possible, through a student conference that will be take place towards the end of the term).

Readings: Anita Rau Badami, Can You Hear the Nightbird Call? (novel); Shauna Singh Baldwin, What the Body Remembers (novel); Bharati Mukherjee, "The Management of Grief" (short story); Anusree Roy, Letters to My Grandma (play); and Padma Viswanathan, Padma, The Ever After of Ashwin Rao (novel).

Students are expected to obtain novels on their own and to have read them (especially the first one) before classes resume.

Registration: via StudIP (until March 31)

| Kommentar | Although the epistolary genre flourished particularly in the 18 th century, the tradition of letters in fiction never waned completely in subsequent periods. We will explore the gradual transformation of the genre from the epistolary novel of the past to the contemporary hybrid novel, in which letters, now also in the form of e-mails, play a significant, yet no longer predominant role. Aspects to be considered will be: the writer-addressee relationship; the rendition of subjectivity through letters; the role of letters as objects in the plots; and the function of letter-writing in the tradition of travel narratives. |

Kommentar

The term "Tartan Noir", coined by Ian Rankin, describes a particular brand of contemporary Scottish crime fiction associated with the exploration of urban spaces, the dual nature of identity, a cynical view of politics and an ever eroding boundary between good and evil. It draws on the traditions of Scottish literature, particularly James Hogg's Romantic novel The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner. This course will explore the intertextual connections between Hogg's novel and contemporary Scottish crime fiction by Ian Rankin and Val McDermid. Although we will not discuss R.L. Stevenson's Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde in detail, it is recommended to read the novella for background knowledge.

Reading: James Hogg, The Private Memoirs and Confessions of a Justified Sinner, ed. Peter Garside, Edinburgh University Press 2002; Val McDermid; The Mermaids Singing, Harper Collins 2015. Ian Rankin, Black and Blue, Orion 2008.

Kommentar What are the right tools to study and understand the true nature of literature? Close reading as a deep analysis of a text's structure and meaning has long been the only answer to this question. Recently, Franco Moretti has challenged this approach with his opposite concept of "distant reading", generating quantitative data with the apparatus of the Digital Humanities. A book-historical approach, taking into account a work's contexts (such as author, publishing history, reception, adaptation etc.) might, as Katie Trumpener has proposed, offer a middle ground between close reading and statistical methods. The course will introduce students to these three ways of reading literature. Honouring the 2017 Austen Bicentenary, the focus will be on Pride and Prejudice and Mansfield Park. It is obligatory to read both novels before the course begins.

Recommended editions: Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, ed. Vivien Jones, Penguin Classics Annotated Edition or Jane Austen, Pride and Prejudice, ed. Claudia L. Johnson, Longman Cultural Edition; Jane Austen, Mansfield Park, ed. Kathryn Sutherland, Penguin Classics Edition.

Kommentar Canada and the United States have many things in common: besides sharing the longest unguarded border in the world and strong economical bounds, they enjoy a unique geographical situation in North America. Unsurprisingly, the attacks on the World Trade Center in September 2001 had an immediate impact on both countries. The events of what is now known as 9/11 affected at once the daily lives of many Canadian and American citizens as well as the U.S.-Canada border. Following the September 11 attacks, there has also been a strong literary response on both sides of the 49th parallel. The aim of this course is to provide an introduction to Francophone and Anglophone Canadian Ground Zero fiction as well as a very brief introduction to American fiction dealing with the same agenda. In a transnational frame of thought, we will analyze selected literary texts from various authors (among others, Margaret Atwood, Paul Auster, Roch Carrier, Siri Hustvedt, Shauna Singh Baldwin, and Amy Waldman). We will explore how both countries' cultural imaginary of September 11 is mirrored in their respective aesthetic representations. Issues such as surveillance, borders (geographical, social, cultural and psychological borders), trauma, identity and commemoration are key points to be discussed. In our conclusion, we will assess the current situation, more than fifteen years after the collapse of the Twin Towers.

A syllabus and a selected bibliography will be provided at the beginning of the semester.

Course will start on April 20, 2017.

Registration deadline: April 14, 2017.

| Kommentar | For more than two decades Native Canadian writer Thomas King (*1943) has addressed issues of the First Nations in his novels, short stories and essays. With his satirical and postmodern writing style, he has uncovered the underlying racism towards the indige- | | nous population which is still present in postcolonial societies. By doing so, he challenges Canada's cultural identity as a multicultural, open and just society.

The course seeks to examine a selection of Thomas King's short stories, his children's book A Coyote Columbus Story (1992) and his famous novel Green Grass, Running Water (1993). Topics include - among others - Native mythology (especially the notion of the Trickster), Native and non-Native cultural identity in Canada, Magical Realism and Post-modernism

Students are expected to get a copy of Thomas King's short story collection A Short History of Indians and Canada (2005, Harper) his novel Green Grass, Running Water (1993, Bantham Book), and his children's book A Coyote Columbus Story (1992, Groundwood Books) prior to the course.
